Murphy and Townsend at it again

Exeter, NH: Several years ago, Exeter's own Jeremy Townsend signed T.M. Murphy to her press, J.N. Townsend Publishing, with his Belltown Mysteries children's series. This partnership put many balls into motion and launched Murphy into a writing career that is now known throughout New England. Well, the Cape Cod writer is back with a new contract, a new book, and a new co-author, his brother Seton Murphy. Townsend's new press, PublishingWorks, Inc. will publish "The Running Waves" on Memorial day of 2010. "The Running Waves" explores a darker side of the Cape that many so-called "townies" fight. Addiction breeds hope as the Murphy brothers paint a vivid picture for all to learn from.

Early Praise for The Running Waves

"The Running Waves by T.M. and Seton Murphy reveals in stylish, uncompromising prose, a Cape Cod milieu rarely — perhaps never — seen by outsiders who believe that the eroding headland is still Thoreau country. With spot-on, nut-and-bolt dialogue, the brothers Murphy paint masterfully, the struggling, blue-collar townies hell bent on getting out or going under. Irony, erudite wit, and the human condition astride page-after-page excitement and triumphant storytelling."
